cination drive with one catch-up day.

In high-risk areas using community-based strategies, a five-day campaign will be conducted with two additional catch-up days. 30 polio cases have been reported across the country so far this year, compared to 74 cases in 2024.

Ms Bhutto-Zardari called upon elected representatives, local government officials, religious leaders and community elders to facilitate access to communities and help counter misinformation and hesitancy.

Meanwhile, as a seven-day polio eradication campaign began in Balochistan, Inam-ul-Haq, the coordinator of the Emergency Operations Centre in Balochistan, said 2.66 million children would be vaccinated.

"The polio virus is present in the province's environment, putting young children at risk at any time," Inam-ul-Haq said. "Protecting children's health is a shared responsibility. If even one child misses the polio drops, all children are at risk." According to a statement, 11,134 teams have been deployed in both urban and remote areas of the province.

Inam-ul-Haq warned that polio can lead to permanent disability if neglected and urged parents to take their children to the nearest health centre for routine immunisation against other deadly diseases, including measles, tuberculosis and Hepatitis B.
